

Evan Collins

Evan is the founding President of the Foundation and also oversees its affiliates, Deaconess Pregnancy & Adoption Services and Open Arms Clinic. While providing long-range strategic leadership to advance the Foundation's mission and values, Evan also promotes growth as an organization insuring cost-effective management of resources.

Aspiring to serve as a catalyst for community collaboration and developing the Foundation as a resource for the community to improve health access and conditions to vulnerable populations, he has brought key individuals in our area together with the hope of coordinating efforts to raise the bar on charitable care in Oklahoma.

Evan came to the Foundation following a long career on Wall Street. He is a graduate of Dartmouth College with a BS degree in psychology, as well as a MBA from the Amos Tuck Schools of Business Administration.

Following his schooling, he joined Kidder, Peabody & Co., where he became a partner and the National Sales Officer. After the firm's sale to GE, he became the president of CEB Investments and later moved to Wachovia Securities where he was a Senior Vice-President.

Currently, Evan is involved in a number of Free Methodist Church activities. He serves as Chair of the Investment Committee on the boards of Azusa Pacific University and the Free Methodist Foundation. Additionally, he serves on the Board of Administration for the Free Methodist Church of Southern California and the board of Eden Reforestation Projects.
